OUR UNION.

"Our Union still,
Strong in the bonds of mighty years,
Unshaken by prophecies of ill,
Fanatics' boasts, or cowards' fears,
Stands proud and firm, and strong, and free,
From North to South—from sea to sea.
The glories of her ancient name,
The memories of her holy past,
Her brilliant hopes of future fame,
Cing round her yet, still firm and fast,
And perish her whose recreant hand
Would pluck one star that gilds her brow,
Or tear apart a single bond.

That links her States together now.
Where is the Arnold who will dare
Despoil our sons for him of old,
And deeper grieve through all time bear
Than he who sold himself for gold ?
Stand by the Union, best of God !

Our fathers, pure in heart and hand,
In council halls and fields of blood,
Wrote freedom upon all our land.
Our mothers, gentle, good, and true,
Yet have as Sparta ever known,
Sent forth their sons to do or die,
To win or fall—but never fly.
For this, and more than this, will we,
The children of that mighty race,
Who boast our high paternity,
And proudly back our lineage trace,
Stand by the Union as it is,
Upheld it 'mid the storm and blast,
While those immortal memories
And that old Constitution last."

From the Washington Union.
